Owing to high winds in the Adriatic, Venice has been visited by an extensive inundation. The Anna of St. Marc was floated through the canals.

The same very successful sketches of the assassin bombs in the crypt of the Dominican church in Lucca have been obtained through the columns of the city press. At last, the persistent animosity has resulted in a coalition that, for the sake of our city's good reputation and for the credit of the aggressors, should not have occurred.

We state the particulars of the occurrence as they were imparted to us by disinterested parties. On Sunday night, twenty-five or thirty members of the Union went to the boarding-house (corner of Eighth and Jefferson) of two workmen from St. Louis who had been engaged by Bridgeford & Co., and insulted and made threats against them for not leaving the foundry and co-operating with the Union. These miscreants left the house without resorting to violence. But their riotous behavior was continued yesterday. About one o'clock, as Raper and Malone, two of the employes of Bridgeford & Co., were quietly returning from dinner to the foundry, they were attacked on the corner of Seventh and Market streets by fifteen or twenty members of the Union. The grave scene in Romeo and Juliet, Macbeth and Witches, the new illustrated poem of the Peri at the Gate, which promises to be the most attractive feature of the evening; scenes from Faust (including the apotheosis of Marguerite); scenes from Dickens, &c. There is one advantage offered by these unique exhibitions which we hope all will appreciate, and this is that here we have presented antique images of classic statuary and other original paintings—immortal works of which otherwise we should have no conception. It is not worth much to have seen a copy of Miss Hosmer's Zenobia, stately and majestic in her captivity, the hands accustomed to wielding the sword, and the face of the assassin ignorantly fettered? Has it not for us all the meaning of real sculpture, with every fold and every feature wrought by the chisel? Could marble itself be more cold and passionless? And if the delusion be perfect, what more can be desired? It is the same with the paintings. Let there be no fear of gratifying a refined and exalted public taste. Let there be a crowded house to-night. It will be remembered that the proceeds are to be divided among the victims.

RICHARD.—Mr. D. de Vivo, the accomplished son of Madame Adelaisse Bistori, honored us with a call yesterday.

He is in the city to effect arrangements for the coming of the great tragedienne, and we are pleased to know that his prospects of commanding the desired and are very good. In fact, it is well selected upon that this greatest of all living tragic artists will shortly appear in Louisville.

Mr. de Vivo informs us that he has the refusal of Masonic Temple from the 11th to the 18th of March, and has telegraphed to the Widows' Home.

This is a fair illustration of what bad feeling and jealousy fostered and encouraged from time to time will finally result in. Such lawless conduct is and should be disapproved and denounced by all good citizens. It was not only disgraceful to those concerned in it, but it is injurious to the society to which they belong and reflects great discredit upon our city. Occurrences of this kind are calculated without the Molders' Union disclaim all connection with the participants, to do them great harm. And we cannot think they will sanction it. We hope for the credit of all concerned that these hostile feelings will soon, for want of encouragement, pass away and be forgotten.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF TRADE.—A called meeting of the Board of Trade was held last night at their rooms. The President, Mr. P. A. Armstrong, made an opening speech, referring to the absence of many of the prominent merchants, and regretting their indifference to the best interests of the city and her business. After these remarks were concluded, the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Some debate then ensued upon the proposed removal to the Ormsby House, when, after a good deal of confusion and bungling, the original motion that started the whole thing, (a motion to take up from the table a motion to reconsider the removal) was withdrawn, and the committee appointed to consult with Superintendents of the railroads, and to ascertain the cost of removing the Ormsby House to the new site.
